how did the gospel of mark come to exist and how was the memory of jesus shaped by the experiences of the earliest christians for centuries biblical scholars examined texts as history literature theology or even as story curiously absent however has been attention to processes of collective memory in the creation of biblical texts drawing on modern explorations of social memory sandra huebenthal presents a model for reading biblical texts as collective memories she demonstrates that the gospel of mark is a text evolving from collective narrative memory based on recollections of jesus s life and teachings huebenthal investigates the principles and structures of how groups remember and how their memory is structured and presented in the case of mark s gospel this includes examining which image of jesus as well as which authorial self image this text as memory constructs reading mark s gospel as a text from collective memory serves less as a key to unlock questions about the historical jesus and more as an examination of memory about him within a particular community providing a new and important framework for interpreting the earliest canonical gospel in context unlike literature in the modern western world ancient documents were typically crafted for the ear rather than the eye this new investigation of the structure of 1 john s prologue analyzes the oral patterning and resulting soundscape reflected in this key new testament passage after discussing contemporary techniques of sound analysis and establishing the study s methodological approach brickle examines the prologue s aural profile here we begin to explore describe and depict graphically the patterns of sound that emerge as the text is read aloud brickle uses the approaches to greek pronunciation and orality advocated in the recent new testament research to determine the impact on the prologue s soundscape followed by an analysis employing the principles for beautiful and effective composition elucidated by the ancient teacher of rhetoric dionysius of halicarnassus in his treatise on literary composition a final section draws together the results and implications of the study before suggesting further ways to apply research in orality performance and memory to the prologue and other ancient texts having established the context of mockery and shame in ancient mediterranean cultures dietmar neufeld shows how mark presented jesus as a person with a sense of honour and with a sense of shame willing to accept the danger of being visible and the mockery it attracted neufeld also considers the social functions of ridicule mockery more broadly as strategies of social sanction leading to a better understanding of how social religious and political practices and discourse variously succeeded or failed in mark finally neufeld investigates the author of mark s preoccupation with secrecy showing that his disposition to secrecy in his narrative heightened when the dangers of scorn and ridicule from crowds or persons became pressing concerns in a fiercely competitive literary environment where mocking and being mocked were ever present dangers mark in his pursuit of authority gains it by establishing a reputation of possessing authentic secret knowledge in short the so called secrecy motif is shown to be deployed for specific strategic reasons that differ from those that have been traditionally advanced this accessible introduction to the gospels examines the distinctive messages offered by the texts giving students a better understanding of methods and interpretations it explores a close reading of each gospel and encourages students to approach texts from their own perspectives from postcolonialism to environmentalism the discussion questions included will help students focus their reflections on the gospel narrative its theology and methods of reading it how to read the gospels is an ideal textbook for undergraduate and seminary classrooms the book aims to reach seminary and graduate students who study the gospels critically and comprehensively it provides user friendly summaries such as the basics of each gospel authorship history important parables etc the jesus of each gospel and notable interpretation and translation issues without reading the entire story readers often focus on only specific passages this book aims to foster close reading of each entire text sensitizing students to historical and literary issues that commonly arise and helping them better understand various ways to interpret these formative stories what makes this book unique is that it also engages various readings of the gospels from traditional to deconstruction approaches including womanist interpretation disability interpretation ecological interpretation and many more for example how can readers understand the story of jesus surprising conversation with the samaritan woman in john 4 through the lens of feminism or postcolonial criticism by providing alternative ways to think about these stories and various methods of approaching texts that may be new to the student the book opens up how such passages can be interpreted and appreciated a new aurally attuned reading of the endings of mark s gospel concentrating on the gospel as ancient popular literature comparing it with xenophon of ephesus erotic romance and using speech act theory as a method to illuminate both narratives prentice hall world studies introduces middle grade students to a region and then focuses on specific countries in each region to create a context for understanding state and local standards civics government and economics in action provides an engaging current and relevant look at the foundations of american government citizenship and the american economic and legal systems the program combines an accessible narrative and engaging visual design with a wide variety of instructional tools from workbooks to interactive technology to motivate students to participate make decisions and take action both in and out of the classroom
